The change from vaudeville to musical comedy met with full approval from the audiences at the Colonial last night, and rightly so, for the tabloid offered is head and shoulders above any seen in this city. It will be recalled that a number of such shows were seen at the Empire Theatre season before last, but none so good as "A Night on Broadway."

but none so good as "A Night on Broadbut none so good as "A Night on Broadway."

One of the unusual features of the performance is the fact that from the start to finish the curtain is not lowered. These productions are usually in two or three acts. There is so much to be done and so short a time to do it in that constant action is necessitated, and, after all, that is what vaudeville demands most—snap, ginger and life.
"A Night on Broadway" has all of that and nore.

Harry Emerson is the old-time Dutch comedian with the dialect, the mannerisms and all those things that go to make him a first-class comedian of the character he elects to impersonate. Of course, there are other characters, many of them, and good ones, too, but to Emerson, who is on the scene constantly, belongs the glory. Grayce Celeste, May Wallace and Maude Harvey shared the honors among the female members about equally.

The chorus, though not great in numbers, is great in appearance, voice and vivacity, and aids materially in the success of the piece. The song numbers are original, and the music is pleasing.
Emerson's "Minky Dee" song had to be repeated no less than nine times by actual count to satisfy the audience, though some of the verses were a little strong.

After the enlargement is accomplished the city will be enabled to widen the street, while the railway company will have a tunnel which can accommodate four tracks. This will relieve congestion in the Southside yaras of the company, which are becoming more and more important every year. The capacity of the yards has been more than doubled by the excavation of a large hill side, and the erection of a dyke along the bank of the river, and the filling in of the reclaimed file general public has been invited to attend to the street.
